Antioch University MFA Program

Antioch University's MFA in Creative Writing program is distinctive for our emphasis on literature, community service, and the pursuit of social justice.

Featuring widely-published, award-winning faculty in fiction, poetry, creative nonfiction, young people, and literary translation, our program has distinguished itself through innovative features such as the MFA Field Study, the Art of Translation, and the Post-MFA Certificate in the Teaching of Creative Writing.

We invite you to call, email, or visit any time—perhaps during the next residency—to explore whether our program might be the right fit for you.

Named one of the top five low-residency MFA programs in the country by The Atlantic and Poets & Writers Magazine

Earning my MFA and Post MFA degrees at Antioch University changed my life. Not only am I a published poet, but I am living by Antioch's core value of a commitment to social justice, proudly giving service to our community, and I have embraced becoming a global literary citizen."

Why Choose a Low-Residency Program?

THE LOW-RESIDENCY MODEL supports and mirrors the lives that professional writers actually live. Our MFA program provides both the nurturing literary community and the solitary discipline working writers need. An MFA semester consists of an intensive 10-day on-campus residency, followed by a five-month online project period during which each student writes fiction, poetry, creative nonfiction, young people, and literary translation, as well as scholarly work, under the supervision of a faculty mentor. Students also participate in online discussion forums covering assigned readings and literary issues, and produce other work specified in their individualized Project Period Contract.

// The 10-day residencies in the MFA program are a model for what you'll experience for your whole life as a writer."

Take 8-Week Online Electives such as Screenwriting I & II

Electives offered in TV/Screenwriting and other genres

MFA STUDENTS are admitted in a single genre (fiction, poetry, creative nonfiction, and young people), but have the opportunity to write and study more than one genre including Literary Translation—and even to challenge the notion of genre itself.

Project Period Options

- ▶ Four semesters in a single genre, working with a different mentor each semester
- ▶ Mixed Concentration (Genre Jump): 3 semesters in a primary genre, 1 in a second genre
- ▶ Dual Concentration: 3 semesters in a primary genre, 2 in a second genre

Pick an option in your second or third semester. Regardless of which option you select, MFA faculty mentors will work closely with you to design an individualized learning plan.

// In tender honesty, before I encountered Antioch's MFA program, I never in my life felt such unending support...the faculty's preternatural x-ray vision saw beyond what I could see of myself. Where I had seen my limitations, they saw fibers of strength. Where I hid talents, they saw down to the bone."

Faculty Who Love to Teach as Well as Write

Every MFA faculty mentor is an actively-publishing writer who is also an exceptional teacher. Our mentors care as deeply about their students as they do about their own writing.

I'm often stimulated and provoked by what Antioch University MFA students are writing... Antioch's emphasis on social justice encourages students to look beyond their own lives and connect their experiences to those of the larger world."

The Field Study

The MFA field study is one way Antioch's program is unique and sets our graduates apart from others. The field study asks students to put their knowledge and skills as writers to work in service of something they personally value in their local communities. Each field study must address at least two of the three aspects of the MFA program's unique purpose: the education of literary artists, community service, and the pursuit of social justice. MFA field studies have changed the lives not only of our students, but also of those their efforts have served.

Work on Our Award-Winning Student-Run Literary Journal Lunch Ticket and/or our Literary Podcast, LitCit (Literary Citizen)

About Lunch Ticket

One side of our mission at Lunch Ticket is to publish writers and artists who have been marginalized and underrepresented, and work that engages with issues of social, economic, and environmental justice. The other side is to allow our volunteer editorial and production teams, staffed entirely by Antioch University MFA students and alumni, to engage with the greater literary community and gain professional experience working in the industry.

About LitCit

Antioch's Literary Citizen explores the multi-faceted life of a writer in today's literary community through insightful interviews with authors, editors, agents, and all of the people who help make writing happen. LitCit is produced and run by members of Antioch's MFA Program.

As I consider how serving on Lunch Ticket has impacted me, I see the work is deeply entwined with my time as an MFA student at Antioch, and that the enmeshed experience has forever filtered the lens through which I view the world."

POST-
MFA

POST-MASTER OF FINE ARTS

Post-MFA Certificate in the Teaching of Creative Writing

IN A SINGLE SEMESTER, our low-residency Post-MFA Certificate program takes aspiring teachers from theory to practice, focusing on methods of teaching writing and allowing the student to gain practical classroom experience through either a face-to-face or an online supervised teaching placement.

The MFA program taught me perseverance and the importance of building a literary community.”

I always felt supported, nurtured, and encouraged in my MFA studies. The focus on social justice was life-affirming, especially in a world where such work seems less and less valued.”

NAOMI BENARON '06

An Enduring Creative Community

Our program provides a uniquely constructive, non-competitive, atmosphere that promotes both creativity and discipline. An active online community allows our students around the nation, and the world, to communicate and bond during the project periods and beyond. The Antioch MFA community attracts students and keeps alumni in touch with faculty and their fellow graduates.

Financing Your Education

After you've been accepted into the MFA in Creative Writing program, finding a way to finance your education will probably become a top priority. While some students are able to pay for their education out of their own pocket, the majority of AULA students rely on other means of financial support including scholarships, grants, work-study opportunities, and student loans. In most cases, graduate students rely on more than one type of financial aid.

Our Financial Aid Office is committed to assisting our students in fully understanding the resources and options available to them. Contact us at finaid.aula@antioch.edu or visit antioch.edu/los-angeles/financial.

ARE YOU A MILITARY-CONNECT STUDENT?

AULA participates in the Post-9/11 GI Education Enhancement Program, also known as the Yellow Ribbon Program. For more information visit antioch.edu/los-angeles/veteran-resources

The Antioch MFA improved my craft, invited me into the writing community, and opened doorways to a literary career. The program changed my life."

About Antioch University

MISSION Antioch University provides learner-centered education to empower students with the knowledge and skills to lead meaningful lives and to advance social, economic, and environmental justice.

HISTORY Our roots go back to the founding of Antioch College in 1852 in Yellow Springs, Ohio. The College's first president, well-known abolitionist and social reformer Horace Mann, is considered the founder of public education in the United States.

In his first graduation speech, he implored Antioch graduates to "be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity." Antioch was the first college in the country to hire a tenure-track woman faculty member and to offer female and male students the same educational opportunities. Antioch integrated black and white students a century before civil rights laws were enacted, and counts civil rights activist Coretta Scott King among its many esteemed alumni.

The current Antioch University began to take shape in the 1960s. As part of the 'university without walls' movement of the 1960s and 70s, Antioch expanded to sites across the country. We opened the Antioch University Los Angeles campus in 1972 and are proud of our 9,000 alumni.

Today's Antioch University includes Antioch University New England, Antioch University Los Angeles, Antioch University Santa Barbara, Antioch University Seattle, Antioch University Online, and the University's Graduate School of Leadership & Change. Collectively, they make up one Antioch University with progressive values and a mission to educate the next generation of those determined to win victories for humanity.

ACCREDITATION Antioch University is accredited by the Higher Learning Commission. The University has had continuous accreditation by the Higher Learning Commission since 1927. Learn more at www.hlcommission.org.
